

KobiMart

The project I am thinking of is a superstore, like Walmart or target. A superstore is a store that sells a vast amount of items in a singular place. The point of a superstore is so people can shop for different things without having to go to multiple different stores. Superstores often also have low prices because of the amount of items they sell. I will name the store, "Kobi Mart" and it will have a huge variety of different items to shop for. I will separate the different items into different pages in my website. These pages will include food, clothing, cleaning supplies/personal care, home furniture/electronics, and the home page.
